

Support to farmers on best agriculture practices and access to market

Objective

This project aims to provide sustainable livelihoods opportunities for youth and women through best agriculture practices and access to market with environmentally friendly solutions.

What can you expect from us?

-  150 women will have skills development in food processing, business skills, and value chain development, enabling them to start successful fruit and vegetable drying enterprises.
-  56 people will have on-the-job carpentry training and provision of toolkits, enabling them to start successful small carpentry enterprises.
-  10 entrepreneurial people will have their entrepreneurial capabilities developed through a 10-day bootcamp, three of whom will receive funding to pursue their business goals.
-  20 successful farmers will have access to technical support and financing to pilot an environmentally friendly business concept.

Who we are
